Book Blurb™

Our feature this month is Fablehaven: Rise of the Evening Star by Brandon Mull. This book is the second one in the Fablehaven series. See our earlier review done last October. Mr. Mull is quickly making a name for himself with these books. The fantasy writer keeps the reader's interest by painting vivid pictures of the creatures and situations that the characters face in the book.

Once again our heroine, Kendra, and hero, Seth, are the sister and brother team and their grandparents, Grandpa Sorenson and his wife play strategic roles in the book. We have our usual dose of imps and fairies this time around. However, Mull ups the ante by adding creatures that come alive from the wall, other animals that have 9 lives and reincarnate each time the animal is sleighed as another being. Each animal is more challenging and ferocious than the last entity. There is a secret castle as well. Remember the movie, Raiders of the Lost Arc? Well, this book has captured the essence of some of the secret rooms and eerie passages from the movie. How about a potion master, a relics collector, and mystical creature catcher as helpers or so one believes. You have to purchase the book to find out who truly is an ally or pretending to be an ally.

The book will keep you turning the pages to see if Seth and Kendra can save themselves, their grandparents, and the free world from the sinister plot of the Evening Star organization. Yes, I just knew you were going to ask...there will be another book. The book is rated S for suspense. Please visit our catalogue to order a book.
